published amidst a decade long increase in academic publications and training courses concerned with the evaluation and design of English language teaching materials. It is timely to consider what effect the advice on offer has had on teachers' practice. Are teachers evaluating materials carefully, using textbooks in the ways expected by textbook writers, developing their own materials, and mediating between materials and learners in the ways advised in the professional literature? The book explores these issues from a variety of perspectives. The views of publishers/textbook writers, those contributing to the professional literature, and teacher educators are synthesised to establish a 'theory' of how teachers can best fulfil their roles vis-à-vis materials and learners. This is then compared with 'practice', as represented by published accounts of teachers' actual practices and learners' perspectives. The conclusion reached is that teacher education in materials evaluation and design is essential and suggestions are offered as to the form this might take. The book is intended particularly for MA students and teacher educators concerned with materials evaluation and design, but is of interest to all those concerned with the publication and use of English language teaching materials.

observed for a long time in the Human Recourse Management, but nowadays the selection of staff and especially the process and possible methods of staff selection play a major role. Each company selects its staff in a different way. There are many methods which can be used. The selection of a suitable method is depending on the position to be filled and what priorities the company has. The Assessment Center is a method of staff selection and has its origin in the military field. Nowadays, the Assessment Center is mainly used to select executives, but also to develop staff. The strengths and weaknesses of each participant are revealed by the Assessment Center, because of its extensive and diverse nature. The Assessment Center offers a number of benefits, but it is also one of the most expensive methods of staff selection, as it is enforced for 1-3 days and many observers are involved. Nevertheless the Assessment Center provides a high accuracy and thus saves a lot of costs that can occur when a company has made a wrong decision in relation to the staff selection, especially in the selection of an executive. There are many ways how Assessment Centers can be realized in context of staff selection, because there are a lot of exercises from which the company can choose and which can be distributed on the selected days. Based upon the research question that has been postulated before, a definition and description of staff selection will be given in chapter two. Furthermore conventional instruments for staff selection such as the analysis of application documents, interviews, tests, biographical questionnaires and graphological reports will be covered. Thereafter, the AC including a definition and description, origin, areas of application, advantages and disadvantages will be addressed in chapter three. Afterwards, the process of staff selection within the AC including preparation, realization and the result will be approached. In the conclusion a summary of the findings, a critical acclaim and an outlook will be given.

Exercise and Cognitive Function Nov 10 2020 Exercise and Cognitive Function focuses on the relationship between physical exercise and cognition, a very timely and important topic with major theoretical and practical implications for a number of areas including ageing, neurorehabilitation, depression and dementia. It brings together a wide range of analytical approaches and experimental results to provide a very useful overview and synthesis of this growing field of study. The book is divided into three parts. Part I covers the conceptual, theoretical and methodological underpinnings and issues. Part II focuses on advances in exercise and cognition research, with appropriate sub-sections on 'acute' and 'chronic' exercise and cognition. Part III presents an overview of the area and makes suggestions for the direction of future research. This is the first book to provide a cutting-edge examination of this increasingly important area written by leading experts from around the world. It will prove invaluable to researchers and practitioners in a number of fields, including exercise science, cognitive science, neuroscience and clinical medicine. • The first book in-depth investigation of the relationship between physical exercise and brain function. • Covers theoretical approaches and experimental results and includes chapters on the latest developments in research design. • Examines the effects of both acute and chronic exercise on brain function. • International list of contributors, who are leading researchers in their field.

The Assessment Center Handbook for Police and Fire Personnel

Dec 12 2020 Over the years, the assessment center method of evaluating and selecting individuals to fill technical, supervisory, and management-level positions has proven to be highly successful in municipal police and fire departments. This fourth edition expands upon the concepts and principles presented in the previous editions and numerous chapters have been extensively edited and reformatted. New sections have been presented on the critical EMS problem as well as Public Education Exercises. The chapter "Best Practices in Assessment Center Exercises" provides many new examples of how candidates can achieve superior performance in many different kinds of assessment exercises. The text continues to offer invaluable insight concerning the reliability, cost-effectiveness, and objective methods for the selection of candidates for higher appointments. Included topics are the advantages of the assessment center; objections to assessment centers; typical and effective assessment exercises; center design and administration; selection and training of assessors; candidate evaluation, scoring, and feedback; preparing for an assessment center; best practices; greatest blunders; and ensuring candidate satisfaction with assessment methods. A substantial appendix offers many valuable resource tools: typical in-basket items; guidelines for scoring; group problem-solving exercises; tactical fire problem scenario; employee meeting exercise; citizen interview exercise; role-playing exercises; shift meeting exercise; community meeting
